K-12 School Consulting

Because adolescence can be a particularly difficult time, problems ranging from mental health disorders to substance abuse begin to appear in students. School consulting services help K-12 institutions create and implement programs aimed at preventing and addressing student behavioral health concerns.

AiR offers schools:

- Research-based drug, alcohol, tobacco and violence prevention programs
- Training
- Program implementation
- Faculty and staff development
- Intervention and mentoring services

In addition, to aid in creating effective policies and programs, AiR's partnership with the industry's leading publisher of behavioral health disorder prevention materials allows schools extensive access to the literature necessary to fulfill the needs of their new programs.

By equipping students with the tools necessary to cope with the strains of life in a healthy manner, schools provide kids with a better chance at future success.
